

February 10, 2012

Hotel marketed to gay travelers to open in NYC

Similar Stories:

- Two tourism crises in South Florida: Sept '08 was as bad or worse than Sept 01
- Near Brickell, a new hotel option for not-so-big spenders
- Flamboyantly spooky fun in New Orleans
- New — or improved — hotels popping up around MIA
- Lower Manhattan is center of what's new in 2011

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK -- A hotel marketed specifically toward gay travelers is opening in the heart of New York City.

The hotel will be called THE OUT NYC. It's being touted as a "straight-friendly" gay boutique resort.

It's set to open March 1 in the Times Square area.

Developer Ian Reisner says it will be a place where gay travelers "can feel 100 percent welcome."

He's hoping gay couples will want to get married there.

Reisner also hopes the 105-room hotel will become a center of gay life in the city.